Hello THSC Friend,

You've made it to summer! Happy June!

Whether you homeschool year-round or take a break until August or September, summer lends itself to a slower change of pace.

Try one of these 17 ideas to usher in the new season with some day trips and some boredom-banishing activities.

Should you plan ahead to relax? Absolutely! It may sound counterintuitive, but it works!

Lastly, try these hands-on learning activities on for size, like learning a foreign language or listening to an audio book in the car for learning on the go!

After all, as John Steinbeck famously said, "People don't take trips, trips take people."

Hope these ideas give joy to your journey,

Homeschooling on the Road = Roadschooing! (5 Educational Summer Vacations)

High on the list of benefits of homeschooling is that you can do it anywhere, even as you travel—especially as you travel. Lessons learned during roadschooling are sure to be among those remembered for a lifetime, because of the multisensory, personal interaction and experience with the subject matter. Why not give roadschooling a try with one of these educational itineraries, or create one of your own!

Have you thought about utilizing dual credit for your high schooler?

Dual credit courses are a great way to start gaining college credit at much more affordable rates than most college courses. While your student is already doing the work for a class, why not get college credit as well and get that degree even faster?

Did you know that THSC members get a special $200 off of Dual Credit At Home?

Did you have to miss out on the Called to Teach Convention?

Guess what? All of our speakers are available to see from both the Allen and the Woodlands convention via our Virtual Called to Teach Convention!

Access to the Called to Teach virtual Convention today - registration INCLUDES virtual exhibit hall, workshops, homeschool roadmap, digital swag, special offers, and digital access through the end of the year.

You don't have to miss the Exhibit Hall, either! Exhibitors will each have a virtual booth where virtual attendees can learn more about the companies and what they have to offer. Some will have video demonstrations, mini-workshops and special offers.

Admission is $25 for non-members and FREE for THSC members!
